Anne Scott-James : Down to Earth before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Down to Earth:

First published in 1971, this work provides a miscellany of ideas on gardening - from designing and planting to paths and hedgerows, the winter garden and the wild garden, creating windbreaks and filling odd corners - as well as a host of suggestions for books to read and gardens to visit.

Enjoy Anne Scott-James's gardening classic with witty illustrations by her cartoonist husband, Osbert Lancaster ... its appeal is to all whose gardens are created with too little money and help, never match up to their dreams, but are a continuous source of pleasure Country Homes Interiors Quality reprint of 1970s classic Daily TelegraphAbout the AuthorSir Osbert Lancaster produced several books on architecture, and from 1939 onwards he produced cartoons for the Daily Express, using his character Maudie Littlehampton to satirise upper-class preoccupations. He died in 1986. Anne Scott-James is the author of a string of successful books including several gardening classics.
