This is not a children's book really. it could be for older children. but this is far too complex for little ones. On top of that, you're going to want this for yourself. go doodle a gothic cathedral, or a victorian mansion...this will guide you in your doodles. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. ... vocational shop class as a Christmas gift and she loved it. It has plenty of creative activities and layouts. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Love this book! By A. Alloy-McFarlin This is such a cute book! I'm using it to get back to the basics of sketching, and I can do it with my 7 year old! I love the simplicity of the drawing style, matched with the fun, little details. Great book!

Draw Me a House is an interactive coloring book for budding architects. Warm, humorous drawings from acclaimed illustrator Thibaud Herem accompany playful suggestions to draw a new top on the Chrysler building, design a deluxe doghouse, or fix up the Parthenon. A delight for adults and children alike.

In an era of Dwell Modern, Danish style and industrial chic, hip parents are looking for hip products to entertain their kids, whilst trying hard not to buy into gross commercialism and mass branding. Draw Me a House, written and illustrated by Thibaud Herem, a French-born illustrator based in London, is one of the most engaging in the new world of "interactive" coloring books. But by interactive not meaning a stylus and a screen, but a pencil and a page. Part coloring book, part sketch pad, educational and inspirational, Herem's book introduces children to the worlds of architecture and design through his signature simple illustration, and then encourages them to explore their own imagination on paper. (Sophie De Rakoff Huffington Post 2012-05-31) About the Author Thibaud Herem is an established illustrator whose work has featured in major campaigns on the London underground and numerous magazines and blogs. He has published two other books, and has worked with prestigious clients including Anya Hindmarch, Nike, Wallpaper* and Harvard University.
