Margaret Lauterbach : Gardening in the Treasure Valley before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Gardening in the Treasure Valley:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Love the gardening bookBy CustomerLove the gardening book. Just really wished there were pictures so I could see the actual plant. However, the book is full of very good information and well written!

As the Idaho Statesmans weekly gardening columnist for 20 years, author Margaret Lauterbach has advised Treasure

Valley gardeners on everything from sowing to composting to coping with the Valleys soils, pests, diseases and unique climate. This book features her very practical advice in an organized format. Lauterbach, who has gardened in Boise for more than 40 years, has been a master gardener and an advanced master gardener in Ada County.

About the AuthorAs the Idaho Statesmans weekly gardening columnist for 20 years, author Margaret Lauterbach has advised Treasure Valley gardeners on everything from sowing to composting to coping with the Valleys soils, pests, diseases and unique climate. Lauterbach, who has gardened in Boise for more than 40 years, has been a master gardener and an advanced master gardener in Ada County, under the tutelage of Susan Bell, horticulture agent at the University of Idaho Extension. Lauterbach was raised in Colorado, where the scarcity and value of water were ingrained along with an appreciation for farmers. Her first gardening experiences were working with her grandmothers, one in a town garden and the other on a farm near Fort Morgan, Colo. When she and her husband, Dr. Charles Lauterbach, moved to Boise, they bought a home on a large lot so she could have an abundant garden. Dr. Lauterbach taught theater arts at Boise State University until his retirement. Margaret Lauterbach has a bachelors degree in journalism from the University of Colorado-Boulder and a masters degree in psychology from Central Washington State University.
